Our Experience

Over the 4 weeks at Ramrao Ingualwe Highschool, we discovered that teaching is more than just lessons. We built genuine connections with the students, learned to communicate ideas in simple and engaging ways, and adapted our teaching to their interests and understanding. From discussing human rights and cyber safety to learning about savings, income, investments, and needs versus wants, every session gave us an opportunity to make everyday knowledge more accessible.

What We Taught

- POCSO & Child Safety
- Human Rights
- Savings & Financial Literacy
- Cybercrime & Online Safety
- Current Affairs & Civic Awareness
- Needs vs. Wants
- Income & Budgeting
- Investment Basics

Our Impact

Through four weeks of teaching, SAATH aimed to give students practical knowledge that they could apply beyond the classroom. Our sessions introduced them to human rights, child protection, cyber safety, financial literacy, savings, budgeting, investments, and current affairs.

More than teaching concepts, we encouraged students to ask questions, think critically, understand their rights, and make informed everyday decisions. The enthusiasm and participation we witnessed showed us that creating a space for learning and discussion can make a meaningful difference.

Student Voices

Student 1 — Sanjana

“Learning can be fun when it connects to everyday life.”

Sanjana enjoyed learning about the 3Rs — Reduce, Reuse and Recycle and shared that the session helped her learn something she could use in everyday life.

Student 2 — Rohit

“Knowing your rights gives you the confidence to speak up.”

Rohit especially enjoyed our session on POCSO and child safety. He learned about understanding what is right and wrong and the importance of speaking up and seeking help.

Student 3 — Harshit

“Understanding your rights is the first step towards protecting yourself.”

Harshit enjoyed learning about POCSO and came away with a better understanding of rights, safety and protection.

Teacher and Principal's Perspective

Bhosale J.M., School Teacher

“The content covered during the sessions was informative, relevant and valuable for the students. The students participated actively and showed genuine interest throughout the sessions. The interactive activities, especially the 3R activity, encouraged their engagement and made the learning experience more effective.”

Class Teacher - Grade 9

“The information given by the students of SAATH was so important and valuable to our students. It was about the 3R system and about POSCO. Our children were so lucky to have important things taught to them.

What we learned

SAATH taught us that meaningful education is not just about delivering information but about making knowledge understandable, relevant, and engaging. We learned how to adapt our communication to different students, listen to their questions, encourage participation, and make every session interactive. Most importantly, we learned that teaching is a two-way process: while we shared our knowledge, the students taught us patience, curiosity, and the value of creating opportunities for others.

Looking Forward

The four weeks are only the beginning of SAATH. We look forward to continuing our sessions, reaching more students, introducing new areas of practical learning, and building on the relationships we have created. Our aim is to make SAATH a sustained initiative where every session leaves students with knowledge they can carry into their everyday lives.

We started with four weeks. We hope to build something that lasts much longer.
