Our Experience

Our experience at Navchaitanya Orphanage can be described in one word: Memorable Over two meaningful weeks, we discovered that true teaching goes far beyond delivering lessons—it's about building genuine human connections. Whether we were discussing human rights and environmental awareness or explaining financial basics like savings, investments, and needs versus wants, every session pushed us to make everyday knowledge accessible, interactive, and fun. Adapting to the children's interests taught us how to communicate complex ideas simply, turning every interaction into a shared journey of learning and growth.

What We Taught

- POCSO & Child Safety
- Human Rights
- Savings & Financial Literacy
- 3Rs: Reduce · Reuse · Recycle · Waste Management
- Sustainable Living
- Swachh Bharat Abhyan
- Banking and Digital Payments
- Needs vs. Wants
- Income & Budgeting
- Investment Basics

Day 1

Topics of the day: Legal Literacy & Environmental Responsibility

- The kids were very disciplined.

- Everyone agreed child labour is wrong.

- When kids hear Kaanoon, they think
    - Police
    - Saza
    - Jail

- Everyone agrees child marriage is merong

- Day 1 of teaching the kids about POCSO is going well

- Red Light, Green Light: Successful

- Good Touch, Bad Touch: Successful

END OF LEGAL BLOCK

START OF ENVIRONMENTAL BLOCK

- Kids demonstrate a sense of environmental responsibility.

- Kids understood Swachh Bharat Abhyan.

- Kids understood saving water and electricity.

- Kids understood the cove concept of keeping one's surroundings clean.

- The kids were very involved in the finger painting activity.

- The paintings the kids made centered around things. We taught them, showing retention and engagement.

Day 2

Topic of the day: Financial Literacy

- The kids retained the knowledge from the previous day.

- The kids had a good grasp on wants and needs.

- The kids are quick to pick up concepts of money management.

- Once we explained to the kids what financial literacy is, they were able to apply it very easily for the rest of the lessons.

General Observations

- The kids are fast learners and demonstrate an intuitive understanding of the topics we taught.

- Kids want to grow up to be
    - Civil engineers
    - Army officers
    - Police officers
    - Doctors
    - Sportspeople

- The room where the kids learn is just an empty room with a small blackboard, a bench, and a table and four chairs for teachers.
The walls were orange, there was one bulletin board, and all the walls were decorated with paints, colours, and paper crafts.
The kids sat on the floor.

Takeaway

At the end of the campaign at this school, we learned one thing: The kids show incredible promise; they just don't have the tools they need.
